

PRESENTATION | JUN 2019

Building Shareholder-Focused Incentive Plans for a New Generation of Investor

Aalap Shah

MANAGING DIRECTOR

Financial metrics have been the bread and butter of our pay-for-performance culture for more than 20 years. However, a new era is dawning and performance is no longer defined solely by the company's bottom line. Investors and the public at large are increasingly pressuring organizations to expand performance criteria beyond traditional financial yardsticks and increase the focus on (and investment in) non-financial drivers of long-term value creation.

Coincidentally, the gutting of 162(m) in recent tax law changes has given companies new freedom to structure compensation programs with an eye on non-financial metrics. The question for each individual entity is what type of non-financial metrics best align with their long-term shareholder—and by extension stakeholders—interests. The answer is likely to be some combination of strategic, operational, human capital, and sustainability-based goals.

This presentation from the Equilar Executive Compensation Summit covers the growing importance of incorporating non-financial metrics into short-and long-term incentive programs from both a company and shareholder perspective. The panel presented the investor perspective on why, regardless of your industry, monitoring and evaluating sustainability is critical to long-term corporate viability and should not be viewed as just “good PR.” It also explored the challenges associated selecting the appropriate metrics, determining objective evaluation protocols, and communicating this new approach.

About the Author

Aalap Shah is a managing director at Pearl Meyer. With more than 20 years of experience, Aalap advises public and privately held companies on executive compensation issues, with focus on pay governance, pay-for-performance alignment, and incentive plan design. Of particular interest is the intersection between business strategy, people strategy, and compensation strategy, believing alignment of all three is required to design effective programs.

About Pearl Meyer

Pearl Meyer is the leading advisor to boards and senior management helping organizations build, develop, and reward great leadership teams that drive long-term success. Our strategy-driven compensation and leadership consulting services act as powerful catalysts for value creation and competitive advantage by addressing the critical links between people and outcomes. Our clients stand at the forefront of their industries and range from emerging high-growth, not-for-profit, and private organizations to the Fortune 500.
